NAVAJO INDIAN HAS BRAINSTORM

Novel Defense Will Be Made by Redskin to Be Tried at St. Johns for Murder—Beat His Wife's Skull in with a Rock—Possessed of Devils.

Cho-gi-ney, a Navajo Indian, was taken through here this week en route to St. John's, Apache county, Arizona, where he will be tried for the murder of his wife, Che-yazz-bi-tai, near Fort Defiance, several days ago, says a Gallup paper. The Indian was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Day at St. Michaels and bound over for murder.

The most curious feature of the case is that the Navajo's counsel, Attorney Donigan, will plead in extenuation of the crime that his client was suffering from a brain storm when he killed his wife. The killing was an especially brutal one, the Indian deliberately entering his hogan and beating his wife's head into a pulp with a fourteen-pound jagged rock.

The murder is one of several that have occurred on or near the reservation in the last few months as a result of Indian superstition.

Cho-gi-ney is a well to do Indian, as Indians go, and it is known that he was fond of his squaw. It is believed that he thought he was going to die and killed his wife so that she would be with him in the next world.

Cho-gi-ney had been told by some of the women and medicine men of the tribe that he was possessed of devils. A grand dance and weird religious ceremony was held by the medicine men and others with the object of casting out the evil spirits. Cho-gi-ney's face was blacked and numerous mysterious incantations were gone through with. It was believed that the devils were almost out of his system when Cho-gi-ney loudly asserted that he wanted to die and left the scene of the exorcism. He went to his hogan, from which blood curdling screams came forth, and the other Indians running to the adobe of Cho-gi-ney, found his wife weltering in her blood with brains spattering all over the place.

The Indian's arrest soon followed. Indian Commissioner Leupp, who was at Fort Defiance at the time, took a particular interest in the case and appointed Attorney Donigan to defend the man on the plea that he was temporarily insane as the result of religious frenzy.

Not long ago the superstition of the Indians resulted in the death of an innocent woman who was denounced as a witch and who was brutally murdered.

Wigs Made of Spun Glass.

The enormous feminine demand for artificial coils and toupes is leading to a famine in human hair. Formerly Swiss, German and Hungarian girls supplied the world of fashionable women with luxurious tresses of all tints.

But the governments of many countries are now making it illegal for a girl to sell her hair or for an agent to buy it. The supply of hair inconsequence is running short, and the price of real hair is trebling.

A series of successful experiments point to spun glass as the most effective substitute for human hair. Wigs made from spun glass are wonderfully light and fine and the texture soft and beautiful.

It is easy to produce any shade desired, while curls and waves can be manufactured at will to suit the fashion of the moment. The imitation is so realistic and true to life that it is impossible to detect the difference between it and real hair grown on the head.—London Daily Mail.
